How to browse the Community Report PDF

The 2005 Community Report is presented to you in the Adobe Portable Document Format (PDF). This file format offers several ways for you to browse through the document:

1: You can page through one page at a time by using either the Page Up/Page Down keys on your keyboard or using the Next/Previous buttons at the bottom of the Acrobat window.

2: You can click directly on the text links in the various Tables of Contents throughout the document. These are linked to go directly to the named section when clicked.

3: You can use the Bookmarks sidebar (this should appear automatically when the document opens. If it doesn’t, go to the View Menu and select Bookmarks from the Navigation Tabs submenu). These bookmarks will take you to the first page of any of the sections listed. You can use the Next/Previous page buttons to browse through the rest of the pages of that section.

We hope that you enjoy the Community Report and find it informative and easy to use.

Introduction

Letter from the Director

Exhibition Schedule
Dear friends,

This year, we are hard at work charting a bold and compelling course for the future of this great institution by focusing, as we always should, on our most important resource - the Museum’s collection - and its potential to inspire, to educate, and to broaden our understanding of the world in which we live. As the Cincinnati Art Museum marks its 124th year of service to the community, we are carefully laying the framework for the Museum to have an even greater impact in the decades to come in our city and the tri-state region.

Among the highlights of our work over the past year and of the year to come are:

- The acquisition of several major works of art that confirm the scope and quality of our collection as one of the finest in the country.

- The introduction of two important educational initiatives that will bring the Museum down off the hill and enable it to reach out to the community.

- The development of a new master plan for our building and site to improve the care and presentation of the collection and transform the Cincinnati Art Museum into a place where the visual arts delight and entertain everyone.

- The creation of several touring exhibitions, including Petra: Lost City of Stone, that showcase the quality and breadth of our collection to audiences throughout the country.

We see a bright future for this institution - Cincinnati’s Art Museum - one that builds upon a rich heritage with imagination and a spirit of commitment to our community. Join us as we paint a vivid picture of the work that our trustees and staff are doing to enrich this great resource and make it an important part of your life.

Timothy Rub
Director

Valerie Newell
President of the Board of Trustees

Mission statement
We will actively engage a diverse and growing audience with great art for their enrichment and enjoyment. We will collect, preserve, study, and exhibit art in accordance with the highest professional standards. We will operate in a fiscally responsible manner.

A Framework for
Preserving and Sharing Our Community’s Treasures

A child’s first encounter with a work of art can be magical. It is the beginning of a journey that can last a lifetime. Art helps us gain a broader understanding about ourselves and form new perspectives about the world in which we live. These are the reasons why the Museum strives to build and preserve a collection that reflects the very best of artistic achievement.

"A museum that does not acquire is a museum that dies,"

Pierre Rosenberg,
former director of the Louvre.
Renoir Joins Impressive Collection of Impressionists

In late 2004, the Museum acquired Pierre-Auguste Renoir’s Fog at Guernsey (1883), a superb addition to its outstanding collection of late 19th century European paintings, which includes works by Edouard Manet, Claude Monet, Camille Pissarro, Vincent Van Gogh, and Paul Gauguin. Renoir’s brilliant view of the coastline of the Isle of Guernsey clearly demonstrates his unique contribution to Impressionism and his genius as a colorist.
Museum Acquires Masterpiece of Early Modern Art Movement

The Museum recently acquired André Derain’s The Bridge at Le Pecq (1904-05), a remarkable example of the innovative pictorial style created by Derain, Maurice de Vlaminck, and Henri Matisse at the beginning of the 20th century. “Fauve painting,” Matisse declared, “is not everything, but it is the foundation of everything.” The acquisition of this masterpiece enhances a collection of modern art that is strong in works by key figures such as Matisse, Picasso, Chagall, and Miró.
Cincinnati Wing is Source of Civic Pride

Since the opening of The Cincinnati Wing in May 2003, hundreds of thousands of visitors have enjoyed learning about the rich history of the arts in the Queen City. These new galleries reveal the importance of our city in the history of American art and showcase the Museum’s important holdings of works by major Cincinnati figures, including Hiram Powers, Robert Scott Duncanson, Frank Duveneck, and John Twachtman. The Cincinnati Wing has also been cited as a national model for the innovative ways it relates the arts to the development of Cincinnati.

The Museum continues to acquire major works created by Cincinnati’s finest artists. This year, we purchased two hanging cabinets made by Benn Pitman, a leader of the Art-Carved Furniture movement. Other recent additions to the collection include a remarkable suite of bedroom furniture in the Anglo-Japanese style by the Mitchell & Rammelsburg Furniture Company, and one of the finest examples of American art pottery, a superb vase crafted by Kataro Shiriyamadani for the Rookwood Pottery Company.
Museum Reinterprets Collections

With a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Museum is planning a comprehensive reinstallation of its Asian art galleries. This project will reveal for the first time the exceptional scope and quality of our Chinese, Japanese, and Indian art works, and will enable visitors to gain a new understanding of the cultures that produced these remarkable objects.

This spring, we also will complete the reinstallation of our American art galleries, as well as our 19th and early 20th century European art galleries. Combining painting, sculpture, and the decorative arts, these galleries will bring the past into vital contact with the present by showcasing recent acquisitions and opening up new perspectives on old favorites.
Historic African Art Collection Reopens to Visitors

After spending several years in storage because of gallery renovations, the Museum’s fine holdings of African art are being reinstalled this spring. Designed to explore the function and meaning of African art, this reinstallation will also present a selection of works from the Steckelman Collection, which was purchased by subscription in 1890 and is the earliest collection of African art to have been acquired by an art museum in this country.

African Art, African Voices: Long Steps Never Broke a Back
October 8, 2005 - January 1, 2006

In conjunction with the reinstallation of the African collection, the Museum will present this innovative traveling exhibition featuring contemporary art from the diverse cultures of West Africa, including Nigeria and the Congo basin. This exhibition is organized by Seattle Art Museum and will make its only Midwest stop in Cincinnati.

A Framework for
Lifelong Learning

You’ll hear the contagious laughter of teachers making African masks together in the Education Center as they discuss new ways of intriguing their students in the classroom. You’ll see a dad and his kids following each other through The Cincinnati Wing on a Saturday afternoon scavenger hunt. You’ll encounter learning every day at the Museum in entertaining and often unexpected ways.

"The Museum has prepared programs that light my imagination…and is dedicated to making my students and me more culturally, aesthetically, and socially sensitive to our rich and abiding heritage,”

Bob Cload Jr.
Teacher, Oyler Elementary School, Cincinnati Public Schools
Families Find Their Space

When families visit the Museum, they now can begin in the Education Center, a lively, interactive space created to acquaint families with the museum experience. While there, adults and children alike learn about special exhibitions, make art, and interact with working artists.

Though just a prototype - the first step in a grander vision for family learning - the Education Center has expanded its hours in recent months due to increasing demand. It is now open all day every Saturday and Sunday. As families explore art in this space, the Museum is learning what families need and want during their visits, and modifying programs and activities accordingly. It’s truly a two-way learning process.
Teachers Bring Art to 1.2 Million Students…and Counting

Since Evenings for Educators, our professional development program for teachers, began in 1989, the Museum has served more than 21,000 teachers. Those teachers, in turn, have introduced the arts to 1.2 million students in the city and region. This innovative approach to helping teachers enrich the curriculum through the arts is offered throughout the school year. Each session offers strategies for teaching everything from social studies to mathematics by using works of art in the Museum’s galleries.

In addition, the Museum is working closely with local school districts, including the Cincinnati Public Schools, Kenton County Schools and New Miami Schools, to establish connections between our collection and their curriculum. Continuing to expand this year is the annual Summer Teacher Institute, an intensive learning seminar focused on using art for lessons in and out of the classroom. This summer’s teachers will focus on Art of Africa, applying the Museum’s reinstalled African art collection.
Smallest Visitors Learn Language Through Visual Arts

The Museum is in the midst of a two-year project to develop new education programs for some of its youngest visitors, children from preschool through third grade. Funded by the National Endowment for the Arts, this program is creating new teaching models that use the Museum’s collection to strengthen the development of language skills. The Museum is developing the program through partnerships with the Arlitt Child and Family Research and Education Center at the University of Cincinnati and the Schiel Primary School for Arts Enrichment, a Cincinnati public school.

Hanten & Happi
Japanese Work coats from the Sumi Collection
July 12 through September 11, 2005

This exhibition features interactive tools throughout the galleries that help families learn about Japanese culture. Kids can explore touchable textile panels, try on Matsuri masks, make noise with modern-day fire clappers, and handle authentic tools used to dye fabrics.
Area School Participation

Last year, 98,000 people participated in education programs at the Museum.

More than 53,000 of those participants were school children.
A Framework for Connecting with Our Broad Community

Local residents who haven’t been to the Museum since their childhood Saturday art classes are rediscovering the joys of learning through the visual arts. Community centers and public libraries are working with our staff to bring the Museum down off the hill and into their neighborhoods. People throughout the world are enjoying the rare treat of masterpieces from our collection traveling to their own backyards. Cincinnati’s art treasures touch people far and wide the more we open up and reach out.

“We are very excited that the Cincinnati Art Museum is coming out to Mason. We’re a family-oriented community, and the culture and diversity the Museum offers is a great avenue to broaden our community’s perspective. Having culture like this at our fingertips is a valuable asset to this area.”

Paige Bryan
Downtown/small business coordinator, City of Mason
Initiative Creates Community Partnerships

This year, the Museum launched its new Community Engagement Initiative. This three-year program focuses on establishing in-depth relationships with four Greater Cincinnati neighborhoods to broaden the Museum’s impact in the region. With input from a community advisory group, two full-time staff members are working to establish strong partnerships in Kenton County, Mason, Walnut Hills, and Colerain Township, connecting residents with current Museum programs and developing new ones to meet the neighborhoods’ specific needs.
Neighbors are the Crowning Glory

Recently, the Museum opened the exhibition Crowns: Portraits of Black Women in Church Hats with the help of various dedicated volunteers. One unique group of women from local churches helped spread the word about the exhibition to their friends and neighbors. They also connected us with local praise dance teams and choral groups for performances at the Museum. In addition, more than 60 local women volunteered to be photographed in their favorite church hats by local photographers Jymi Bolden and Melvin Grier. This stunning display of local crowns portraits was featured at the Museum on Mother’s Day weekend.
Museum Brings National Exhibitions to Midwest

In 2005, the Museum opens its doors to several major traveling exhibitions unique not only to Cincinnati but also to the entire Midwest. From 110 of America’s finest painters in Strokes of Genius: Masterworks from the New Britain of American Art, to the alluring artistry of the common man in Japan, demonstrated in Hanten & Happi: Japanese Work Coats from the Sumi Collection, these exhibitions will bring a world of art here to Cincinnati.

271,000 people visited the Museum during the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 2004.
So far this fiscal year, 166,584 people have visited the Museum, a 3.5% increase over the same period last year.
City of Cincinnati Connects with City of Stone

Last fall, more than 62,000 visitors discovered Petra: Lost City of Stone at the Cincinnati Art Museum, an exhibition showcasing the Museum’s world-renowned collection of Nabataean art from modern-day Jordan. Now we are taking the story of the ancient city of Petra to venues across North America as part of an international tour. Ten years in the making, Petra: Lost City of Stone was co-organized by the Cincinnati Art Museum and made possible by a groundbreaking partnership between the United States and Jordan.
Cincinnati’s Calder and Miró Cornerstones of International Exhibition

Works of art loaned by the Museum often appear in major international exhibitions. This is an important responsibility and one that enables us to share the Museum’s remarkable collection with the world. This year, two of the Museum’s masterpieces of 20th century art, Mural for the Terrace Plaza Hotel, Cincinnati by Joan Miró and Twenty Leaves and an Apple by Alexander Calder, return to Cincinnati after being prominently featured in Calder/Miró, an international exhibition at the Fondation Beyeler in Basel, Switzerland and the Phillips Collection in Washington, D.C.

_Drawn by the Brush: Oil Sketches by Peter Paul Rubens_
June 11 to September 11, 2005

The most recent traveling exhibition organized by the Museum offers an intimate look at the work of one of Europe’s greatest painters, Peter Paul Rubens. Focusing on the artist’s remarkable oil sketches, it is the first exhibition of its kind in the United States and will be seen nowhere else in the Midwest. In addition to its Cincinnati appearance, it has traveled this year to California and the East Coast.
A Framework for
A Dynamic Future

Art museums have changed dramatically over the past several decades. So, too, have the communities they serve. How will the museum of the future look and function, and how do we need to change to meet the needs of the community?

- Art Academy and Museum Exchange Properties
- Museum’s National Planning Firm Already Familiar with Cincinnati
- Museum Incorporating Public Input into Facilities Master planning Process
- A History of the Museum Building

Art Academy and Museum Exchange Properties

In September 2005, the Art Academy of Cincinnati will leave Eden Park and move to a new, larger campus on Jackson Street in Over-the-Rhine, thanks in part to a property exchange with the Museum. In turn, we will receive the Art Academy’s original building, located adjacent to the Museum. This represents an extraordinary opportunity for both institutions.
Museum’s National Planning Firm Already Familiar with Cincinnati

To evaluate its current and future physical needs, the Museum recently selected Cooper Robertson & Partners of New York to assist with the development of a new facilities master plan. One of the leading architectural planning firms in the country, Cooper Robertson & Partners have created master plans for a number of important cultural institutions, including the Museum of Modern Art, the Cleveland Museum of Art, and the Seattle Art Museum. In addition to these national projects, the firm also is familiar with Cincinnati as current planners for the Fountain Square redevelopment project.
Museum Incorporating Public Input into Facilities Master Planning Process

The process of developing a new facilities master plan for the Cincinnati Art Museum will involve several steps: a thorough review of our site and physical plant; an analysis of present and future space needs; and, most importantly, a careful consideration of the needs of the community. For this reason, we are conducting interviews with volunteers, members, and community leaders to help us understand how we can strengthen the role of the Cincinnati Art Museum as a vital cultural resource for the city and the region.
History of building growth

Phase 1, 1886-7: Original Art Museum structure opens, one of the oldest purpose-built museums in the country. Art Academy building opens soon after. Both buildings were originally freestanding and built in Romanesque Revival style.

Phase 2, 1907: Schmidlapp Memorial built in the neoclassical style, with a long, single-story corridor leading back to the original Museum structure. Originally on the backside of the Museum but now serves as the main entrance.

Phase 3, 1930: Hanna, French and Emery Wings opened; creating a circulation loop through the Museum around a newly enclosed courtyard. All Museum buildings now connected.

Phase 4, 1938: Alms Wing built in the original Romanesque Revival style, as stipulated by donor Eleanora Alms.

Challenges Today:

- The Museum building was built incrementally, and there is no coherent architectural style, nor is there a coherent circulation pattern for visitors.
- Many parts of the building are more than 100 years old, and they were built to serve different purposes than how Museums operate now.
- Most of the more than 240,000 square feet of space in the building were built during the Museum’s first 80 years (1881-1962). There have been no significant additions to the structure in more than 40 years. Since the latest addition in 1962, our collection, staff, visitorship have grown significantly. In turn, demands on the facility have increased, and the current structure no longer serves the needs of our visitors.

Major Project and Program Support

Each year, individuals, foundations, government agencies, and private trusts provide gifts and grants to support a diverse range of the Cincinnati Art Museum’s mission-related activities. Without special funding, it would not be possible to accomplish many new and exciting projects, including ongoing gallery renovations and improvements, innovative educational programs for children, families and adults, the installation of advanced technologies, and the initiation of cutting-edge programs aimed at building new audiences while retaining a loyal core of visitors, members, and volunteers. Please join us in thanking those who have made gifts of $1,000 or more during fiscal year 2003-2004 in support of special projects and programs.

Endowment Funds

The Cincinnati Art Museum Endowment Fund consists of funds dating back to the Museum’s founding in 1886. Many of these funds are named for a donor or family. Several funds are restricted for specific purposes. The Museum’s conservative spending policy ensures preservation of the principal while encouraging investment growth to keep pace with the economy. Collectively, these endowed funds provide support for vital Museum programs and art acquisition. Listed below are the named funds that comprise the Cincinnati Art Museum Endowment Funds.

2004 Fine Arts Fund

The 2004 Fine Arts Fund Campaign could not have hit a milestone--becoming the #1 United Arts Fund in the country--without the generous support provided by the following companies and organizations, through corporate and foundation gifts, as well as the generosity of their employees. We stand in awe and appreciation of your continued commitment to building a strong community for both our businesses and our families. Thank you for a job well done!
